【例題】(国際基督教大学 教養学部 入試 典型形式・改題)

Read the passage and answer the questions that follow.

When the field that would come to be called "peace studies" first established itself in universities in the 1950s, its founders made what struck many of their colleagues as an unusual claim. The proper object of academic attention, they argued, was not the well-developed study of how wars begin and end, but the much less developed study of what makes the absence of war, when it occurs, actually durable. War studies, by then several centuries old, had produced sophisticated accounts of strategy, diplomacy, and international institutions. The new field would address itself to the comparatively unexamined question of how societies that had escaped large-scale violence managed to remain that way.

The argument was not, on its face, controversial. Few would deny that, all else equal, peace is preferable to war. Yet the early peace researchers found themselves attacked from several directions. Realist political scientists argued that the new field rested on a sentimentalism that mistook for analysis what was really wishful thinking. Activists on the political left, by contrast, complained that the field's focus on the "absence of war" was insufficiently demanding — that a society in which most people lived in conditions of grinding poverty, even if no armies marched through its streets, could not meaningfully be described as peaceful at all. Both criticisms, the founders gradually came to recognize, had an element of truth.

The response to the second criticism produced one of the field's most enduring conceptual distinctions. The Norwegian sociologist Johan Galtung proposed, in a series of papers in the 1960s, that students of peace should distinguish between "negative peace" — the mere absence of organized physical violence — and "positive peace," which required the further absence of what he called "structural violence." By structural violence, Galtung meant the harm done to people by social arrangements that systematically deprived them of resources, opportunities, or recognition, even when no individual could be straightforwardly identified as the perpetrator. A society in which children regularly died of preventable diseases because their families could not afford treatment was, on this view, a violent society, even if its army had not fired a shot in decades.

The distinction had considerable analytical power. It allowed peace researchers to recognize what activists had been insisting upon — that the absence of war was a necessary but insufficient condition for the kind of social life worth defending — without abandoning the original insight that the conditions of stable non-violence were themselves worth careful study. It also opened the field to collaboration with the developing literatures on inequality, public health, and human rights, in ways that earlier framings could not have accommodated.

Critics of the expanded conception have not been silent. They argue that by including under "peace" everything that contributes to human flourishing, the concept loses the analytical sharpness it once promised, and risks becoming a kind of catch-all for whatever the analyst happens to value. A field that purports to be about everything, the criticism runs, has an awkward tendency to be useful for nothing. Defenders respond that the breadth is principled rather than promiscuous, that the connections between physical violence and structural deprivation are well documented, and that an artificially narrow concept would simply hand the difficult work of those connections to disciplines that have shown less appetite for it.

What seems clear, looking back, is that the early peace researchers identified a real lacuna. The study of how war begins is fascinating, important, and well populated; the study of how the absence of war is maintained — under what conditions, with what kinds of institutional support, against what predictable threats — remains less developed than the importance of the question warrants. Whether the answers come under the heading of "peace studies" or of some other label is, in the end, a question of academic geography. The deeper question is whether the institutions of the early twenty-first century are giving the maintenance of peace the kind of sustained attention its difficulty deserves.

Q1. What unusual claim did the founders of peace studies make in the 1950s?

- ① That all wars should be immediately stopped by force.
- ② That academic attention should turn to the much less developed question of what makes the absence of war durable, rather than to the well-developed study of how wars begin.

- ③ That war was the only legitimate subject of academic study.
- ④ That universities should abolish all departments of strategy and diplomacy.

Q2. From what two directions were the early peace researchers attacked?

- ① From realist political scientists who saw the field as sentimental wishful thinking, and from activists on the left who found the focus on the mere "absence of war" insufficiently demanding.
- ② From religious conservatives and military commanders.
- ③ From economists and historians.
- ④ From the founders' own students and former colleagues.

Q3. What distinction did Johan Galtung introduce?

- ① The distinction between civil and international war.
- ② The distinction between "negative peace" (mere absence of organized physical violence) and "positive peace" (further absence of "structural violence").
- ③ The distinction between religious and secular peace.
- ④ The distinction between European and non-European conflict.

Q4. Why does the author argue that Galtung's distinction had "considerable analytical power"?

- ① Because it allowed peace researchers to recognize the activist insight (that absence of war is necessary but insufficient) without abandoning the original project, and opened collaboration with literatures on inequality, public health, and human rights.
- ② Because it ended all subsequent debate about peace.
- ③ Because it proved mathematically that all wars could be prevented.
- ④ Because it received the Nobel Peace Prize.

Q5. What is the critique of the "expanded conception" of peace, according to the fifth paragraph?

- ① That by including everything that contributes to human flourishing, the concept loses analytical sharpness and risks becoming a catch-all useful for nothing.
- ② That positive peace is technically impossible.
- ③ That Galtung was not a credentialed academic.
- ④ That peace studies has been replaced by other disciplines.

Q6. Which of the following best summarizes the author's overall conclusion?

- ① Peace studies has been a complete failure and should be abandoned.
- ② The early peace researchers identified a real lacuna; the study of how the absence of war is maintained remains less developed than its importance warrants, and the deeper question is whether contemporary institutions give that maintenance the sustained attention it deserves.
- ③ War is more interesting than peace as an academic subject.
- ④ All peace studies departments should merge with war studies departments.

第2章 (解法の全体方針と武器整理・3 分)

ICU エッセイは「学問領域の登場 → 批判の登場 → 概念的発展 → 拡張の弁明 → 学際的含意」の7段論法。

【ジャンル分析】

本文は典型的な (A) academic-discipline history essay。ICU の長文は (B) 学問の制度史・概念史 が頻出 (平和学・ジェンダー研究・環境学・地域研究等)。本問は peace studies の 70 年間を圧縮し、「negative peace / positive peace」概念の発展を辿る。

【本問で必要な 4 つの武器】

- ① (A) 概念史の時系列 (1950s 創設 → 1960s Galtung 二分法 → 現代の批判)
- ② (B) 両側からの批判 (realist + activist) と著者の応答
- ③ (C) 学術用語の文脈推測 — "lacuna" "catch-all" "structural violence" "promiscuous"
- ④ (D) 著者の立場 = 学際的擁護者と読む

【各設問の戦略】

Q1 (創設時の主張) → 第 1 段 "much less developed study of what makes the absence of war durable"

Q2 (両側批判) → 第 2 段 "realist ... sentimentalism" と "activists ... insufficiently demanding"

Q3 (Galtung 二分法) → 第 3 段 "negative peace ... positive peace ... structural violence"

Q4 (二分法の効用) → 第 4 段 "considerable analytical power"

Q5 (拡張批判) → 第 5 段 "loses the analytical sharpness ... catch-all"

Q6 (全体結論) → 最終段 "real lacuna ... deeper question"

第3章 (Q1 + Q2 — 創設主張 + 両側批判・8 分)

「学問の起源 + 初期反対」を続けて聞く。

【Q1 設問】 What unusual claim did the founders of peace studies make?

★ 第 1 段の論理

"The proper object of academic attention, they argued, was (A) not the well-developed study of how wars begin and end, but the much less developed study of what makes the absence of war, when it occurs, actually durable."

★ Q1 paraphrase

本文 "not the well-developed study of how wars begin ... the much less developed study of what makes the absence of war ... durable"

選択肢② "academic attention should turn to the much less developed question of what makes the absence of war durable, rather than to the well-developed study of how wars begin"

→ 直接対応 (順序入替のみ)。

【Q1 正解】 ② That academic attention should turn to the much less developed question of what makes the absence of war durable, rather than to the well-developed study of how wars begin.

【Q2 設問】 From what two directions were the early peace researchers attacked?

★ 第 2 段の論理

"(A) Realist political scientists argued that the new field rested on a sentimentalism that mistook for analysis what was really wishful thinking. (B) Activists on the political left, by contrast, complained that the field's focus on the 'absence of war' was insufficiently demanding — that a society in which most people lived in conditions of grinding poverty ... could not meaningfully be described as peaceful at all."

★ Q2 paraphrase

本文 "Realist political scientists ... sentimentalism ... wishful thinking ... Activists on the political left ... insufficiently demanding"

選択肢① "From realist political scientists who saw the field as sentimental wishful thinking, and from activists on the left who found the focus on the mere 'absence of war' insufficiently demanding"

→ 直接対応。

【Q2 正解】① From realist political scientists who saw the field as sentimental wishful thinking, and from activists on the left who found the focus on the mere "absence of war" insufficiently demanding.

💡 ICU エッセイの典型: 学問が両側 (保守的 vs 進歩的) から批判される構図が頻出。これは学問が両極の間にある中道路線を取る予兆。

第4章 (Q3 + Q4 — Galtung 二分法 + 分析的力・10 分)

「概念導入 + その学術的効用」を続けて聞く。ICU の中核設問。

【Q3 設問】 What distinction did Johan Galtung introduce?

★ 第 3 段の論理

"The Norwegian sociologist Johan Galtung proposed ... that students of peace should distinguish between '(A) negative peace' — the mere absence of organized physical violence — and '(B) positive peace,' which required the further absence of what he called '(C) structural violence.'"

"By structural violence, Galtung meant the harm done to people by social arrangements that systematically deprived them of resources, opportunities, or recognition, even when no individual could be straightforwardly identified as the perpetrator."

★ Q3 paraphrase

本文 "negative peace ... mere absence of organized physical violence ... positive peace ... further absence of ... structural violence"

選択肢② "negative peace (mere absence of organized physical violence) and positive peace (further absence of structural violence)"

→ 直接対応。

【Q3 正解】 ② The distinction between "negative peace" (mere absence of organized physical violence) and "positive peace" (further absence of "structural violence").

【Q4 設問】 Why does the author argue that Galtung's distinction had "considerable analytical power"?

★ 第 4 段の論理

"It allowed peace researchers to (A) recognize what activists had been insisting upon — that the absence of war was a necessary but insufficient condition for the kind of social life worth defending — without abandoning the original insight that the conditions of stable non-violence were themselves worth careful study. It also (B) opened the field to collaboration with the developing literatures on inequality, public health, and human rights."

★ Q4 paraphrase

本文 "recognize what activists ... necessary but insufficient ... opened the field to collaboration with ... inequality, public health, and human rights"

選択肢① "allowed peace researchers to recognize the activist insight (that absence of war is necessary but insufficient) without abandoning the original project, and opened collaboration with literatures on inequality, public health, and human rights"

→ 直接対応。

【Q4 正解】① Because it allowed peace researchers to recognize the activist insight (that absence of war is necessary but insufficient) without abandoning the original project, and opened collaboration with literatures on inequality, public health, and human rights.

★ 重要観察 — Q3 と Q4 の連動

Q3 = 概念の内容 → Q4 = その学術的効用。 (A) 概念 → 機能 の連続設問は学問史エッセイの典型。 Galtung の二分法は、第 2 段の両側批判 (realist + activist) を統合する装置として機能する。

Galtung 二分法の統合機能

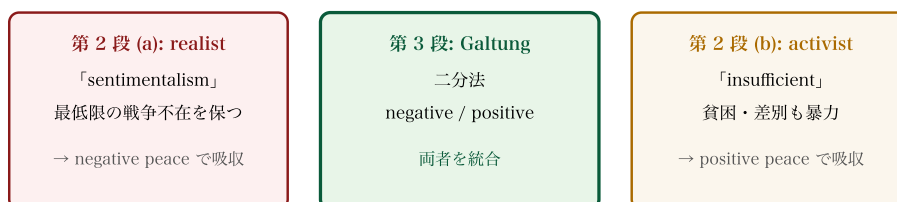

図 5-1 Galtung 二分法 = realist と activist の対立を概念的に統合する装置

第5章 (Q5 — 拡張への批判・5 分)

「概念拡張への批判」を読む。学問の限界設定問題。

【設問】 What is the critique of the "expanded conception" of peace?

★ 第 5 段の論理

"they argue that by including under 'peace' everything that contributes to human flourishing, the concept (A) loses the analytical sharpness it once promised, and risks becoming (B) a kind of catch-all for whatever the analyst happens to value. A field that purports to be about everything, the criticism runs, has an awkward tendency to be useful for nothing."

★ paraphrase 対応

本文 "loses the analytical sharpness ... catch-all ... useful for nothing"

選択肢① "by including everything that contributes to human flourishing, the concept loses analytical sharpness and risks becoming a catch-all useful for nothing"

→ 直接対応。

★ 誤答分析

- ・ ② "positive peace is technically impossible" → (A) 本文に技術論なし。
- ・ ③ "Galtung was not a credentialed academic" → (B) 無関係。本文では Norwegian sociologist と明示。
- ・ ④ "peace studies has been replaced" → 本文と (C) 逆方向。著者は擁護派。

【正解】 ① That by including everything that contributes to human flourishing, the concept loses analytical sharpness and risks becoming a catch-all useful for nothing.

💡 catch-all 批判 = 何でも入る概念は何にも使えない。学問方法論の基本的論点。Popper の「反証可能性」原理と通底する。

第6章 (Q6 — Main Idea 設問 + 関連話題・10 分)

ICU エッセイの結論は「lacuna の同定 + 現代への問い」型。

【設問】 Which of the following best summarizes the author's overall conclusion?

★ 最終段の精読

"What seems clear, looking back, is that (A) the early peace researchers identified a real lacuna. The study of how war begins is fascinating, important, and well populated; the study of how the absence of war is maintained ... (B) remains less developed than the importance of the question warrants."

"The deeper question is whether (C) the institutions of the early twenty-first century are giving the maintenance of peace the kind of sustained attention its difficulty deserves."

→ 主旨 3 要素:

- ①初期 peace researchers は real lacuna を同定 (擁護)
- ②維持の研究は重要度に比して未発達 (現状認識)
- ③現代制度が十分な注意を払っているかが deeper question (現代への問い)

★ 選択肢②との対応

"The early peace researchers identified a real lacuna; the study of how the absence of war is maintained remains less developed than its importance warrants, and the deeper question is whether contemporary institutions give that maintenance the sustained attention it deserves."

→ 3 要素すべて含む。

【正解】 ② The early peace researchers identified a real lacuna; the study of how the absence of war is maintained remains less developed than its importance warrants, and the deeper question is whether contemporary institutions give that maintenance the sustained attention it deserves.

★ 関連話題 — ICU 進学後への接続

- ・ (A) Johan Galtung — 平和学の創始者の一人、PRIO 設立
- ・ (B) Kenneth Boulding — 米国側の peace research 創始者

- ・ (D) Jane Addams — 19 世紀末の peace activist、Nobel 平和賞 1931
- ・ (A) 広島・長崎被爆体験 / 沖縄基地問題 — 日本固有の平和学テーマ
- ・ (B) ICU の平和研究所 (Peace Research Institute) — 日本でも有数の研究拠点

★ ICU の入試がこのテーマを選ぶ理由

- ・ ICU の創設理念 (1953 年、戦後の国際協調) と平和学は密接に関連
- ・ 「学問とは何か」を問う metacognitive エッセイは ICU の Liberal Arts 教育の核心
- ・ 帰国生・国際バカロレア出身者が多い ICU では、学問の制度史を理解する力が重視される

第7章 (ICU 英語 攻略のコツ・5 分)

ICU 長文を完答するための 5 つの技術。

【コツ 1】 7 段論法 (学問創設 → 両側批判 → 概念導入 → 効用 → 新批判 → 応答 → 現代への含意) を予測

ICU エッセイは「ある学問の制度史」を扱うことが多い。各段の役割を識別。

【コツ 2】 学問史の固有名詞

- ・ (A) Johan Galtung (1930-2024) — 平和学創始者、ノルウェー
- ・ (B) Kenneth Boulding — 米国 peace economics
- ・ (C) Edward Said — ポストコロニアル研究
- ・ (D) Hannah Arendt — 政治哲学

ICU は「学問の創始者」を題材にすることが多い。

【コツ 3】 ICU 頻出語の文脈推測

lacuna / sentimentalism / catch-all / promiscuous / structural violence / negative/positive peace / academic geography / sustained attention / perpetrator

【コツ 4】 誤答パターン 4 種 (ICU 版)

- ・ (A) 学問否定: complete failure / abandoned / replaced
- ・ (B) 技術論への矮小化: technically impossible / mathematically proven
- ・ (C) 資格批判: not credentialed / not properly trained
- ・ (D) 極端化: only / always / never / abolish

【コツ 5】 時間配分 (ICU 70 分の ATLAS 中、長文読解部分)

長文 1 題 + リスニング + 文法を含むので、長文には (A) 25-30 分 を上限。

【最後にひとこと】

ICU の英語は (A) 語学試験 であると同時に (B) Liberal Arts リテラシー試験。本問の平和学論は、入学後に学ぶ国際関係論・社会学・思想史の核心テーマ。

第8章 (類題チャレンジ・10 分) [10 点]

本講義の手法を応用する 5 問。

(類題 1) 本文中の "lacuna" の意味として最も近いものを選びなさい。

- ① 空白・欠如・未開拓領域
- ② 古代ローマの闘技場
- ③ 南米の湖
- ④ 数学的証明

(類題 2) 本文の "structural violence" が示唆するものとして最も適切なものを選びなさい。

- ① 個人を加害者と特定できない、社会制度を通じて与えられる害
- ② 建築物の物理的崩壊
- ③ 国家間の武力衝突
- ④ 暴力的なデモ行進

(類題 3) 本文中で著者が "catch-all" を批判的に引用する目的として最も適切なものを選びなさい。

- ① 「何でも含む概念は何にも使えない」という拡張批判の典型表現として
- ② 野球の捕球技術として
- ③ 万能な解決策の称賛として
- ④ 国際機関の包括的アプローチとして

(類題 4) 本文の "academic geography" が示唆するものとして最も適切なものを選びなさい。

- ① 学問が地理的・制度的にどこに位置するか (どの学部・学科で扱うか) という分類問題
- ② 地理学の学術書
- ③ 大学のキャンパスマップ
- ④ 国際留学先の地理

(類題 5) 本文の論理構成として最も近いものを選びなさい。

- ① 学問創設 → 両側批判 (realist + activist) → Galtung 二分法 → 効用 → 拡張批判 → 著者の応答 → 現代への問い
- ② 結論先出し → 根拠列挙のみ
- ③ 賛成意見の単純な列挙
- ④ 歴史的説明のみで結論なし

第9章 (まとめ・宿題・5 分)

今日の核心整理と ICU 本番に向けた宿題

【本日の核心 5 か条】

- ① ICU エッセイは (A) 「学問の制度史」 を扱うことが多い。7 段論法 (創設 → 批判 → 概念 → 効用 → 新批判 → 応答 → 現代) を予測。
- ② (B) 両側からの批判 (realist + activist) を統合する概念 (Galtung 二分法) の登場が中盤の山。
- ③ NOT 設問は 「(C) 資格批判 / 技術不可能」 など本文の論じない次元が罠。
- ④ 修辞設問は 「(D) 概念 → 機能」 (なぜその概念が effective か) を聞く。
- ⑤ 主旨設問は (A) 「lacuna 同定 + 現代への問い」 型を選ぶ。「complete failure / replaced」は罠。

【宿題】

- ① 本講義の Q1-Q6 を見ないで本文だけ読み直し、自分で 6 問の設問を作成。
- ② 類題 5 問を解き直し、本文 7 段の各段にひと言タイトルを書き出す。
- ③ 過去問: 国際基督教大学 英語 (過去 5 年分) から長文 1 題を選び、本日の手法で精読する。

【次回授業】 ICU の英作文 (250 words 程度) — "Is 'positive peace' a useful concept or simply a catch-all?" の論理構成

【最後にひとこと】

ICU の英語は (A) 語学試験 であると同時に (B) Liberal Arts リテラシー試験。本問の平和学論は、入学後に学ぶ国際関係論・社会学・思想史の核心テーマ。
