第1章 (例題 — 立命館 国際関係レベル・5 分)

立命館 国際関係は 80 分・大問 3 題。本問は長文 1 題で 30 分相当。

【例題】(立命館大学 国際関係学部 入試 典型形式・改題)

Read the passage and answer the questions that follow.

The modern international system rests on a foundational assumption that has shaped the practical organization of human life for nearly four centuries. Sovereign states, the assumption holds, have ultimate authority over the territory they govern and over the people who reside within their borders. Other states may complain, exert pressure, or in extreme cases use force, but the basic responsibility for what happens inside any one state is, in the first instance, that state's own. The legal and political institutions of the modern world — the United Nations, the system of bilateral diplomacy, the law of treaties — all presuppose this basic architecture, even when they qualify it.

The mass movement of people fleeing persecution, war, or generalized violence has, since the middle of the twentieth century, sat uneasily within this framework. The 1951 Refugee Convention, drafted in the aftermath of the displacement that the Second World War produced, established a limited obligation: states that signed the Convention agreed not to return refugees to territories where they faced serious threats to their lives or freedom. The obligation, known as non-refoulement, was deliberately narrow. It did not require states to accept refugees in unlimited numbers; it did not specify, in detail, what level of protection they were owed once accepted; it did not address what should happen if the number of people seeking refuge exceeded the capacity, or the willingness, of any one state to receive them.

For several decades, the gap between the limited legal commitment and the practical pressures of large-scale displacement could be managed within the existing framework. Refugee flows, while painful, were generally regional and finite; the wealthier states found it possible, with some grumbling, to absorb their share of those who reached their borders. The arrangement was never beautiful, but it functioned tolerably well within the basic assumption of sovereign discretion.

Several developments of the past two decades have placed that arrangement under strain. The collapse of state authority in several regions — Syria, Afghanistan, parts of Central America — has produced refugee flows whose scale exceeds anything the framers of the 1951 Convention foresaw. The political backlash against immigration in many destination democracies has narrowed the room for generous reception of new arrivals. The development of physical and digital infrastructures of border control — fences, biometric databases, agreements that pay third countries to detain migrants — has made it possible for states to exclude people more thoroughly than the older arrangement had assumed. The result has been a growing population of people whom states are not legally permitted to return to their countries of origin but to whom no state is willing to extend the practical protection that arrival on its territory was once thought to imply.

A growing body of scholarship has begun to argue that this situation is the predictable consequence of building a refugee regime on top of an unchanged commitment to sovereign discretion. The 1951 Convention assumed that the political will to receive refugees, while imperfect, was substantial; the regime now operates in a political environment in which that will has dramatically eroded. Without an enforceable mechanism for sharing responsibility across states, the states most willing to receive refugees end up with disproportionate burdens, while the states least willing impose on the system the costs of their own reluctance.

Proposals for reform have been numerous. They range from incremental adjustments — formalizing the existing informal arrangements by which neighbouring states host the overwhelming majority of refugees, with subsidies from wealthier members of the international community — to more ambitious projects that would create something closer to a binding international system of allocation. The more ambitious proposals face an obvious political problem: states reluctant to receive refugees on a discretionary basis are not generally enthusiastic about binding themselves to receive them under international obligation. The more modest proposals face a different problem: they may stabilize an arrangement that, by the standards the refugee regime was originally meant to uphold, is itself unjust.

What seems harder to deny is that the practical problem will not be made to disappear by faithfulness to an architecture designed for a world that no longer exists. Whether the response takes the form of a renegotiated international regime, of decisions by particular regional groupings to accept obligations that the wider system does not impose, or of the gradual erosion of the refugee protections that the 1951 Convention secured, the present arrangement is unlikely to remain stable for very much longer. The deeper question is whether the international community has the political imagination to redesign its arrangements before the existing ones collapse under their own contradictions, or whether it will allow the redesign to be done for it by the events themselves.

Q1. What foundational assumption underlies the modern international system, according to the first paragraph?

- ① That the United Nations has ultimate authority over all states.
- ② That sovereign states have ultimate authority over the territory they govern and the people residing within their borders, with other states' role limited to complaint, pressure, or in extreme cases force.
- ③ That all governance should be conducted at the local level only.
- ④ That international treaties are legally non-binding.

Q2. What is the principle of non-refoulement, as established by the 1951 Refugee Convention?

- ① An unlimited obligation to admit any person claiming refugee status.
- ② A limited obligation that states which signed the Convention agreed not to return refugees to territories where they faced serious threats to their lives or freedom.
- ③ A complete ban on all international travel.
- ④ An obligation to extradite all criminals across borders.

Q3. Which of the following is NOT cited in the fourth paragraph as a development that placed the existing refugee arrangement under strain?

- ① The collapse of state authority in Syria, Afghanistan, and parts of Central America.
- ② Political backlash against immigration in many destination democracies.
- ③ The development of physical and digital infrastructures of border control.
- ④ The signing of the 1951 Refugee Convention itself.

Q4. What is the central argument of "a growing body of scholarship" cited in the fifth paragraph?

- ① That the situation is the predictable consequence of building a refugee regime on top of an unchanged commitment to sovereign discretion; without enforceable responsibility-sharing, the most willing states bear disproportionate burdens.

- ② That all refugees should be sent back to their countries of origin.
- ③ That refugees produce more wealth than they consume in every country that accepts them.
- ④ That the 1951 Convention should be expanded to cover economic migrants.

Q5. What problems do the more ambitious reform proposals (binding international allocation) face, according to the sixth paragraph?

- ① States reluctant to receive refugees on a discretionary basis are not enthusiastic about binding themselves to receive them under international obligation.
- ② They would require the abolition of all international borders.
- ③ They have already been completely implemented.
- ④ They have been opposed only by refugee advocates themselves.

Q6. Which of the following best summarizes the author's overall conclusion?

- ① The 1951 Refugee Convention is now perfectly adequate for contemporary circumstances.
- ② The practical problem will not disappear by faithfulness to an architecture designed for a world that no longer exists; the present arrangement is unlikely to remain stable, and the deeper question is whether the international community has the political imagination to redesign its arrangements before they collapse, or whether the redesign will be done for it by events themselves.
- ③ All borders should be immediately abolished.
- ④ Refugees should never be permitted to cross any international border.

難民レジームの構造的矛盾 — 主権 + non-refoulement

図 1-1 難民レジームの structural contradiction — 1951 想定 vs 現実

第2章 (解法の全体方針と武器整理・3 分)

立命館国関の長文は「制度の前提 → 制度の限定 → 現状 → 強い負荷 → 学術的診断 → 改革提案 → 政治的含意」の 7 段論法。

【ジャンル分析】

本文は典型的な (A) international relations + international law essay。著者は 7 段かけて、難民レジームを Westphalian sovereignty の枠組みから批判する。(B) 立命館国関の長文は国際法・国際政治の現代論争が頻出。

【本問で必要な 4 つの武器】

- ① (A) Westphalian sovereignty の構造把握 (sovereign discretion = 国家裁量)
- ② (B) 1951 Convention の限定性 — non-refoulement のみ
- ③ (C) 国際法用語の文脈推測 — "sovereign discretion" "non-refoulement" "bilateral" "discretionary"
- ④ (D) 著者の立場 = 改革論者だが慎重派と読む

【各設問の戦略】

Q1 (主権前提) → 第 1 段 "sovereign states ... ultimate authority"

Q2 (non-refoulement) → 第 2 段 "states ... agreed not to return refugees"

Q3 (NOT 設問・strain) → 第 4 段の 3 要因リストから外れる選択肢

Q4 (学術的診断) → 第 5 段 "predictable consequence of building ... on top of ... sovereign discretion"

Q5 (ambitious proposals の困難) → 第 6 段 "not generally enthusiastic about binding themselves"

Q6 (全体結論) → 最終段 "political imagination to redesign ... before ... collapse"

第3章 (Q1 + Q2 — 主権前提 + non-refoulement ・ 8 分)

「制度の前提 + 限定的義務」を続けて聞く。

【Q1 設問】 What foundational assumption underlies the modern international system?

★ 第 1 段の論理

"Sovereign states, the assumption holds, have (A) ultimate authority over the territory they govern and over the people who reside within their borders. Other states may complain, exert pressure, or in extreme cases use force, but the basic responsibility ... is, in the first instance, that state's own."

★ Q1 paraphrase

本文 "ultimate authority over the territory ... people residing within their borders ... other states ... complain, pressure, or ... force"

選択肢② "sovereign states have ultimate authority over the territory they govern and the people residing within their borders, with other states' role limited to complaint, pressure, or in extreme cases force"

→ 直接対応。

【Q1 正解】 ② That sovereign states have ultimate authority over the territory they govern and the people residing within their borders, with other states' role limited to complaint, pressure, or in extreme cases force.

【Q2 設問】 What is the principle of non-refoulement?

★ 第 2 段の論理

"The 1951 Refugee Convention ... established a limited obligation: (A) states that signed the Convention agreed not to return refugees to territories where they faced serious threats to their lives or freedom. The obligation, known as non-refoulement, was (B) deliberately narrow."

★ Q2 paraphrase

本文 "limited obligation ... not to return refugees to territories where they faced serious threats to their lives or freedom"

選択肢② "limited obligation that states which signed the Convention agreed not to return refugees to territories where they faced serious threats to their lives or freedom"
→ 直接対応。

【Q2 正解】 ② A limited obligation that states which signed the Convention agreed not to return refugees to territories where they faced serious threats to their lives or freedom.

💡 国際法用語: non-refoulement (ノン・ルフールマン) はフランス語語源。1951 Convention 第 33 条で確立。立命館国関で頻出。

第4章 (Q3 — NOT 設問・strain 要因・5 分)

第 4 段の 3 要因リストから外れる選択肢を消去法で。

【設問】 Which of the following is NOT cited as a development that placed the existing refugee arrangement under strain?

★ 第 4 段の strain 要因

- ・ (i) "(A) The collapse of state authority in several regions — Syria, Afghanistan, parts of Central America"
- ・ (ii) "(B) The political backlash against immigration in many destination democracies"
- ・ (iii) "(C) The development of physical and digital infrastructures of border control — fences, biometric databases, agreements that pay third countries to detain migrants"

★ 選択肢と照合

- ・ ① "collapse of state authority in Syria, Afghanistan, Central America" → 根拠 (i) 下線A : ○
- ・ ② "Political backlash against immigration" → 根拠 (ii) 下線A : ○
- ・ ③ "physical and digital infrastructures of border control" → 根拠 (iii) 下線A : ○
- ・ ④ "signing of the 1951 Refugee Convention itself" → (B) 逆方向。1951 Convention は問題の解決枠組みであって、strain の原因ではない。

【正解】 ④ The signing of the 1951 Refugee Convention itself.

💡 NOT 設問の罠: 「制度自体が問題」と取らせる選択肢が罠。本文では制度は問題解決のための枠組み (但し不十分)。

第5章 (Q4 — 学術的診断・5 分)

「制度の構造的問題」を読む。立命館国関の中核。

【設問】 What is the central argument of "a growing body of scholarship"?

★ 第 5 段の論理

"this situation is the (A) predictable consequence of building a refugee regime on top of an unchanged commitment to sovereign discretion. The 1951 Convention assumed that the political will to receive refugees, while imperfect, was substantial; the regime now operates in a political environment in which (B) that will has dramatically eroded. Without an (C) enforceable mechanism for sharing responsibility across states, the states most willing to receive refugees end up with disproportionate burdens."

★ paraphrase 対応

本文 "predictable consequence ... sovereign discretion ... no enforceable mechanism for sharing responsibility ... disproportionate burdens"

選択肢① "the situation is the predictable consequence of building a refugee regime on top of an unchanged commitment to sovereign discretion; without enforceable responsibility-sharing, the most willing states bear disproportionate burdens"

→ 直接対応。

★ 誤答分析

- ・ ② "all refugees should be sent back" → 本文と (A) 正反対。non-refoulement と矛盾。
- ・ ③ "refugees produce more wealth" → (B) 本文に経済論なし。
- ・ ④ "expanded to cover economic migrants" → (C) 本文に対象拡張提案なし。

【正解】 ① That the situation is the predictable consequence of building a refugee regime on top of an unchanged commitment to sovereign discretion; without enforceable responsibility-sharing, the most willing states bear disproportionate burdens.

💡 国際関係理論: structural mismatch (構造的不一致) の論証。制度の設計時の前提と現在の運用環境が乖離している、というのが立命館国関頻出の論点。

改革提案の二項対立 — ambitious vs incremental

図 5-1 改革のジレンマ — 両方向ともに政治的・道徳的困難

第6章 (Q5 + Q6 — ambitious 提案 + 全体結論・10 分)

「改革の困難 + 著者の結論」を続けて聞く。

【Q5 設問】 What problems do the more ambitious reform proposals face?

★ 第 6 段の論理

"The more ambitious proposals face an obvious political problem: (A) states reluctant to receive refugees on a discretionary basis are not generally enthusiastic about binding themselves to receive them under international obligation."

★ Q5 paraphrase

本文 "states reluctant ... not generally enthusiastic about binding themselves"

選択肢① "states reluctant to receive refugees on a discretionary basis are not enthusiastic about binding themselves to receive them under international obligation"

→ 直接対応。

【Q5 正解】 ① States reluctant to receive refugees on a discretionary basis are not enthusiastic about binding themselves to receive them under international obligation.

【Q6 設問】 Which of the following best summarizes the author's overall conclusion?

★ 最終段の精読

"What seems harder to deny is that (A) the practical problem will not be made to disappear by faithfulness to an architecture designed for a world that no longer exists."

"the (B) present arrangement is unlikely to remain stable for very much longer. The deeper question is whether the international community has the (C) political imagination to redesign its arrangements before the existing ones collapse under their own contradictions, or whether it will allow the redesign to be done for it by the events themselves."

→ 主旨 3 要素:

- ①古い制度への忠誠では問題は消えない
- ②現状は持続不可能
- ③制度を redesign するか events に任せるかが分岐点

★ Q6 paraphrase

選択肢② "the practical problem will not disappear by faithfulness to an architecture designed for a world that no longer exists; the present arrangement is unlikely to remain stable, and the deeper question is whether the international community has the political imagination to redesign its arrangements before they collapse, or whether the redesign will be done for it by events themselves"

→ 3 要素すべて含む。

【正解】 ② The practical problem will not disappear by faithfulness to an architecture designed for a world that no longer exists; the present arrangement is unlikely to remain stable, and the deeper question is whether the international community has the political imagination to redesign its arrangements before they collapse, or whether the redesign will be done for it by events themselves.

第7章 (立命館国関英語 攻略のコツ・5 分)

立命館国関長文を完答するための 5 つの技術。

【コツ 1】 7 段論法 (制度前提 → 制度限定 → 安定期 → 強い負荷 → 学術的診断 → 改革提案 → 政治的含意) を予測

【コツ 2】 国際関係・国際法の固有名詞

- ・ (A) Westphalia 1648 / UN Charter 1945 / 1951 Refugee Convention — 国際秩序の三礎
- ・ (B) UNHCR / IOM (国際移住機関) — 主要機関
- ・ (C) Arendt / Benhabib / Carens / Walzer — 移民の哲学者
- ・ (D) Syria / Afghanistan / Ukraine / Rohingya — 21 世紀の主要難民事例

【コツ 3】 立命館国関頻出語の文脈推測

sovereign discretion / non-refoulement / bilateral / multilateral / binding / enforceable / disproportionate burden / political backlash / biometric / collapse

【コツ 4】 誤答パターン 4 種 (国関版)

- ・ (A) 極端化: abolished all borders / never permitted / definitively confirmed
- ・ (B) 逆方向: refugees should be sent back (non-refoulement と矛盾)
- ・ (C) 論点ずれ: 経済効果のみ・宗教対立のみ・テロ対策のみ
- ・ (D) 制度否定: 1951 Convention 自体を strain 要因と取る

【コツ 5】 時間配分 (立命館国関 80 分)

長文には(A) 30 分を割く。

第8章 (類題チャレンジ・10 分) [10 点]

本講義の手法を応用する 5 問。

(類題 1) 本文中の "sovereign discretion" の意味として最も近いものを選びなさい。

- ① 国家が誰を受け入れるかを自由に決定できる権限
- ② 君主の個人的趣味
- ③ 国連の決議権
- ④ 国家機密保持の義務

(類題 2) 本文の "non-refoulement" が示すものとして最も適切なものを選びなさい。

- ① 難民を迫害の恐れのある領土に送還してはならないという国際法上の原則
- ② 国境警備の強化
- ③ 外交関係の断絶
- ④ 国際機関への加盟拒否

(類題 3) 本文中で「Syria, Afghanistan, parts of Central America」が引用される目的として最も適切なものを選びなさい。

- ① 21 世紀の大規模難民発生源の典型事例として
- ② 経済発展の成功事例として
- ③ EU 加盟候補国として
- ④ 国連安保理常任理事国として

(類題 4) 本文の "disproportionate burdens" が示唆する状況として最も適切なものを選びなさい。

- ① 受入意思のある国に負担が集中し、拒否する国が負担を回避する不公平
- ② 難民自身の心理的負担
- ③ 国際機関の財政赤字
- ④ 国境警備隊の労働時間

(類題 5) 本文の論理構成として最も近いものを選びなさい。

- ① 主権前提 → 1951 Convention の限定義務 → 数十年の安定 → 21 世紀の strain (3 要因) → 学術的診断 → 改革提案 (ambitious vs incremental) → 政治的含意 (redesign or collapse)
- ② 結論先出し → 根拠列挙のみ
- ③ 賛成意見の単純な列挙
- ④ 歴史的説明のみで結論なし

第9章 (まとめ・宿題・5 分)

今日の核心整理と立命館国関本番に向けた宿題

【本日の核心 5 か条】

- ① 国関エッセイは (A) 「制度の前提 → 限定 → 強い負荷 → 構造的診断 → 改革のジレンマ → 政治的含意」 の 7 段論法。
- ② (B) sovereign discretion + non-refoulement は本文の核心キー概念。
- ③ NOT 設問は「(C) 制度自体を strain 要因と取る」選択肢が罠。
- ④ 修辞設問は「(D) structural mismatch」(設計時の前提と現運用環境の乖離) を聞く。
- ⑤ 主旨設問は(A) 「redesign or collapse」型を選ぶ。「abolish borders / never permit」は罠。

【宿題】

- ① 本講義の Q1-Q6 を見ないで本文だけ読み直し、自分で 6 問の設問を作成。
- ② 類題 5 問を解き直し、本文 7 段の各段にひと言タイトルを書き出す。
- ③ 過去問: 立命館大学 国際関係学部 英語 (過去 5 年分) から長文 1 題を選び、本日の手法で精読する。

【最後にひとこと】

立命館国関の英語は(A) 語学試験であると同時に(B) 国際関係リテラシー試験。本問の難民レジーム論は、入学後に学ぶ国際法・グローバル・ガバナンス論の核心テーマ。
