

関西大学 文学部 英語 自習プリント

英語が得意な人のための「私大難関本番レベル」 — なぜ我々はフィクション
を読み続けるか

2026 年 5 月 26 日

高校 3 年～既卒 (難関私大文系志望)

英語 (関西大学 文学部・本番水準)

Trillion 塾

第1章 (例題 — 関西大学 文学部レベル・5 分)

関大文学英語は 90 分・大問 3 題。本問は長文 1 題で 30 分相当。

【例題】(関西大学 文学部 入試 典型形式・改題)

Read the passage and answer the questions that follow.

Whenever a new medium of storytelling has appeared — the printed novel, the cinema, television, streaming video — observers have predicted, with some confidence, that older forms of fiction would soon be displaced. The printed novel was supposed to retire the oral tale; the cinema was supposed to retire the printed novel; television was supposed to retire the cinema. None of these displacements actually occurred. Each new medium did, in some measure, alter the cultural position of its predecessors, but the older forms persisted, often acquiring new audiences and new prestige in the process. The history of storytelling is not, as the displacement story would have it, a sequence of replacements, but an accumulation of forms whose users move freely among them.

Yet a more recent version of the displacement claim has emerged with the rise of high-quality streaming drama. Why, the question runs, would a reader continue to commit the slow hours that a serious novel demands when the same number of hours, spent watching a thoughtfully produced series, can deliver an experience that is denser, more emotionally charged, and considerably more visible to one's friends? The novel, in this telling, will eventually become a minority taste, sustained mainly by professional readers and by an older generation whose habits were formed before the alternatives became available.

The argument has the merit of taking seriously the genuine pleasures of the new forms. Serious drama, of the kind that streaming platforms have made unusually plentiful, can do things — sustain a character across dozens of hours, deploy resources of music and image that no novel can match — that have no easy literary equivalent. The argument's weakness, however, lies in its assumption that the experience of reading fiction is simply a more primitive version of the experience of watching it, an assumption that closer attention to either form does not support.

Reading and watching, defenders of the novel point out, are not different ways of consuming the same product. They are different activities, with different demands, different rewards, and different relations to the inner life of the person engaged in them. A novel asks its reader to produce, from the marks on a page, the entire imaginative content of the scene; a film or a series, by contrast, delivers most of the perceptible content directly, leaving the viewer's imagination a more circumscribed task. Neither form is inherently superior. But the activities are different enough that one cannot, in general, be used as a substitute for the other.

A further consideration concerns the kind of moral attention that fiction asks of us. Long-form prose narrative is, in many cases, the only available medium for the slow and detailed presentation of an interior life — for the experience of inhabiting, over hundreds of pages, a consciousness not one's own. Some television series approach this kind of intimacy, but the medium's reliance on what characters say and do, rather than on what they think, places limits on how far the approach can be carried. The philosopher Martha Nussbaum has argued, drawing on a long tradition of literary thinking, that this capacity for the slow exploration of foreign interiority is one of the principal moral resources that literature provides — that it teaches us, in a way that few other practices can, to recognize the inner lives of those whose outward circumstances are remote from our own.

None of this implies that the visual fictions should be regarded as less valuable. Many of them, on their own terms, are works of genuine art. The point is rather that what each form can do well is different from what the others can do well, and that the displacement story radically underestimates the loss involved when one form is allowed to absorb the audiences of another.

What seems harder to deny is that the present moment is one in which the older form — the novel, the long short story — requires a kind of cultural attention that the surrounding economy of distraction does not naturally provide. A reader who wishes to be the kind of reader the great novels presuppose will have to make, on their own behalf, the time and the silence that earlier generations could more or less take for granted. Whether enough readers will continue to make that choice is, of course, an empirical question. What seems clear is that the choice is worth making, and that the displacement story, for all its plausibility, has misdescribed what is actually at stake.

Q1. According to the first paragraph, what has the history of storytelling actually been?

- ① A sequence of replacements in which each new medium has retired the older forms.
- ② An accumulation of forms whose users move freely among them, with older forms persisting and often acquiring new audiences and prestige.
- ③ A constant decline in the quality of narrative experience.
- ④ A history of suppression by government censors.

Q2. What is the "more recent version of the displacement claim" raised in the second paragraph?

- ① That novels will be replaced by oral storytelling traditions.
- ② That readers will increasingly abandon novels for high-quality streaming drama, since the latter is denser, more emotionally charged, and more visible to one's friends.
- ③ That cinema will displace television.
- ④ That all forms of fiction should be banned.

Q3. What is the central weakness of the displacement argument, according to the author?

- ① That it assumes the experience of reading fiction is simply a more primitive version of the experience of watching it — an assumption that close attention does not support.
- ② That it relies on outdated technology.
- ③ That it has never been articulated by any serious thinker.
- ④ That it is unfashionable in academic circles.

Q4. What is the key difference between reading and watching, according to the defenders of the novel?

- ① Reading produces the imaginative content from marks on a page, while a film delivers most of the perceptible content directly, leaving the viewer's imagination a more circumscribed task.
- ② Reading requires more expensive equipment.
- ③ Watching is morally superior to reading in all cases.
- ④ The two activities are essentially identical.

Q5. Why does the author cite Martha Nussbaum?

- ① To argue that television is morally superior to literature.
- ② To support the view that long-form prose's capacity for the slow exploration of foreign interiority is one of the principal moral resources literature provides — teaching us to recognize the inner lives of those whose circumstances are remote from our own.

- ③ To recommend that all university students major in philosophy.
- ④ To suggest that television series cannot tell a coherent story.

Q6. Which of the following best summarizes the author's overall conclusion?

- ① Visual fictions should be regarded as inherently inferior to novels.
- ② Readers who wish to be the kind of reader the great novels presuppose will have to make, on their own behalf, the time and silence earlier generations could take for granted; the choice is worth making, and the displacement story has misdescribed what is at stake.
- ③ All forms of storytelling will inevitably disappear.
- ④ Novels should be made shorter to compete with streaming drama.

物語の歴史 — 置換ではなく蓄積

図 1-1 著者が反論する displacement story と擁護する accumulation 史観

第2章 (解法の全体方針と武器整理・3 分)

関大文学の長文は「通念 → 新バージョンの通念 → 楽観派の擁護 → 通念批判 → 哲学的根拠 → 留保 → 実践的提言」の 7 段論法。

【ジャンル分析】

本文は典型的な (A) literary defense essay (文学擁護エッセイ)。著者は 7 段かけて「streaming 時代に小説は必要か」という現代的問いを哲学的に扱う。(B) 関大文学の長文はメディア論・文学論・美学が交差するテーマが頻出。

【本問に必要な 4 つの武器】

- ① (A) 歴史的素描 → 現代適用 の流れ (第 1-2 段)
- ② (B) reading vs watching の現象学的区別 (第 3-4 段)
- ③ (C) 文学・美学用語の文脈推測 — "displacement" "interiority" "circumscribed" "presuppose"
- ④ (D) 著者の立場 = 小説擁護派、ただし反 elitism と読む

【各設問の戦略】

Q1 (歴史) → 第 1 段 "accumulation of forms"

Q2 (現代版置換論) → 第 2 段 "denser, more emotionally charged"

Q3 (置換論の弱点) → 第 3 段 "simply a more primitive version"

Q4 (reading vs watching) → 第 4 段 "produce ... from the marks on a page ... circumscribed"

Q5 (Nussbaum) → 第 5 段 "moral resources ... slow exploration of foreign interiority"

Q6 (全体結論) → 最終段 "time and the silence ... earlier generations could ... take for granted"

第3章 (Q1 + Q2 — 歴史 + 現代版置換論・8 分)

「歴史的素描 + 現代版反復」を続けて聞く。

【Q1 設問】 What has the history of storytelling actually been?

★ 第 1 段の論理

"The history of storytelling is not, as the displacement story would have it, a sequence of replacements, but (A) an accumulation of forms whose users move freely among them."

補強: "the older forms persisted, often acquiring new audiences and new prestige in the process."

★ Q1 paraphrase

本文 "accumulation of forms ... move freely ... older forms persisted ... new audiences and new prestige"

選択肢② "An accumulation of forms whose users move freely among them, with older forms persisting and often acquiring new audiences and prestige"

→ 直接対応。

【Q1 正解】 ② An accumulation of forms whose users move freely among them, with older forms persisting and often acquiring new audiences and prestige.

【Q2 設問】 What is the "more recent version of the displacement claim"?

★ 第 2 段の論理

"Why ... would a reader continue to commit the slow hours that a serious novel demands when the same number of hours, spent watching a thoughtfully produced series, can deliver an experience that is (A) denser, more emotionally charged, and considerably more visible to one's friends?"

★ Q2 paraphrase

本文 "abandon novels ... high-quality streaming drama ... denser, more emotionally charged ... more visible to one's friends"

選択肢② "readers will increasingly abandon novels for high-quality streaming drama, since the latter is denser, more emotionally charged, and more visible to one's friends"

→ 直接対応 (3 要素すべて)。

【Q2 正解】② That readers will increasingly abandon novels for high-quality streaming drama, since the latter is denser, more emotionally charged, and more visible to one's friends.

💡 注目: "visible to one's friends" は SNS 時代の「観た作品をシェアして承認を得る」社会的動機の比喻。

第4章 (Q3 + Q4 — 置換論批判 + 現象学的区別・10 分)

「批判 + 哲学的区別」を続けて聞く。文学エッセイの中核。

【Q3 設問】 What is the central weakness of the displacement argument?

★ 第 3 段の論理

"The argument's weakness, however, lies in its assumption that (A) the experience of reading fiction is simply a more primitive version of the experience of watching it, an assumption that closer attention to either form does not support."

★ Q3 paraphrase

本文 "the experience of reading fiction is simply a more primitive version of the experience of watching it ... closer attention ... does not support"

選択肢① "it assumes the experience of reading fiction is simply a more primitive version of the experience of watching it — an assumption that close attention does not support"

→ 直接対応。

【Q3 正解】 ① That it assumes the experience of reading fiction is simply a more primitive version of the experience of watching it — an assumption that close attention does not support.

【Q4 設問】 What is the key difference between reading and watching?

★ 第 4 段の論理

"A novel asks its reader to (A) produce, from the marks on a page, the entire imaginative content of the scene; a film or a series, by contrast, (B) delivers most of the perceptible content directly, leaving the viewer's imagination a more circumscribed task."

★ Q4 paraphrase

本文 "produce ... from the marks on a page ... imaginative content ... delivers most of the perceptible content directly ... viewer's imagination ... more circumscribed"

選択肢① "Reading produces the imaginative content from marks on a page, while a film delivers most of the perceptible content directly, leaving the viewer's imagination a more circumscribed task"

→ 直接対応。

【Q4 正解】① Reading produces the imaginative content from marks on a page, while a film delivers most of the perceptible content directly, leaving the viewer's imagination a more circumscribed task.

★ 重要観察 — Q3 と Q4 の連動

Q3 = 批判 (reading ≠ primitive watching) → Q4 = 区別の根拠 (production vs reception)。 (A) 同じ「フィクション体験」でも認知的活動が全く異なるという現象学的論証。

reading vs watching — 現象学的に違う活動

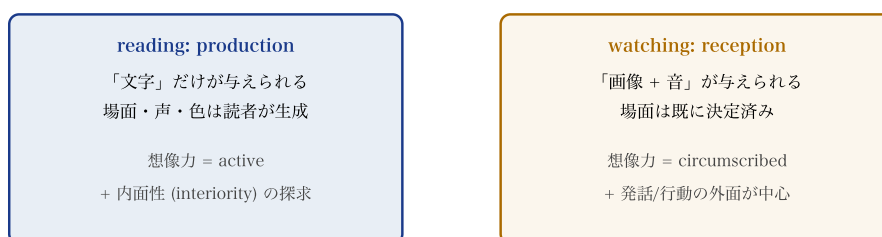

図 5-1 文学擁護の哲学的根拠 — 異なる活動は互いに代替できない

第5章 (Q5 — Nussbaum の引用目的・5 分)

「哲学者の引用 + 道徳的根拠」を読む。

【設問】 Why does the author cite Martha Nussbaum?

★ 第 5 段の論理

"Long-form prose narrative is, in many cases, the only available medium for the (A) slow and detailed presentation of an interior life — for the experience of (B) inhabiting, over hundreds of pages, a consciousness not one's own."

"The philosopher Martha Nussbaum has argued ... that this capacity for the (A) slow exploration of foreign interiority is one of the (C) principal moral resources that literature provides — that it teaches us, in a way that few other practices can, to (D) recognize the inner lives of those whose outward circumstances are remote from our own."

★ paraphrase 対応

本文 "slow exploration of foreign interiority ... principal moral resources ... recognize the inner lives of those whose outward circumstances are remote from our own"

選択肢② "long-form prose's capacity for the slow exploration of foreign interiority is one of the principal moral resources literature provides — teaching us to recognize the inner lives of those whose circumstances are remote from our own"

→ 直接対応。

★ 誤答分析

- ・ ① "television is morally superior" → (A) 本文と正反対。Nussbaum は literature 擁護派。
- ・ ③ "all university students major in philosophy" → (B) 論点ずれ。
- ・ ④ "television series cannot tell a coherent story" → (C) 本文と異なる。著者は本文中「Some television series approach this kind of intimacy」と認めている。

【正解】 ② To support the view that long-form prose's capacity for the slow exploration of foreign interiority is one of the principal moral resources literature provides — teaching us to recognize the inner lives of those whose circumstances are remote from our own.

💡 Nussbaum 重要概念: "narrative imagination" (Cultivating Humanity, 1997)。文学は「他者の内面に住まう」訓練として民主主義に不可欠だという論証。立教 文化構想・関大 文学で頻出

引用。

第6章 (Q6 — Main Idea 設問 + 関連話題・10 分)

文学擁護エッセイの結論は「読者の選択への問いかけ」型。

【設問】 Which of the following best summarizes the author's overall conclusion?

★ 最終段の精読

"A reader who wishes to be the kind of reader the great novels presuppose will have to (A) make, on their own behalf, the time and the silence that earlier generations could more or less take for granted."

"What seems clear is that (B) the choice is worth making, and that the displacement story, for all its plausibility, has misdescribed what is actually at stake."

→ 主旨 3 要素:

- ①読者は意識的に時間と静寂を作る必要
- ②その選択は worth making
- ③displacement story は問題の本質を取り違えている

★ 選択肢②との対応

"Readers who wish to be the kind of reader the great novels presuppose will have to make, on their own behalf, the time and silence earlier generations could take for granted; the choice is worth making, and the displacement story has misdescribed what is at stake"

→ 3 要素すべて含む。

【正解】 ② Readers who wish to be the kind of reader the great novels presuppose will have to make, on their own behalf, the time and silence earlier generations could take for granted; the choice is worth making, and the displacement story has misdescribed what is at stake.

★ 関連話題 — 関大文学進学後への接続

- ・ (A) Martha Nussbaum "Poetic Justice" (1995) / "Cultivating Humanity" (1997) — 文学の道徳教育機能
- ・ (B) Wolfgang Iser "The Act of Reading" (1976) — 読者反応理論
- ・ (C) Roland Barthes "S/Z" / "From Work to Text" — 読みの生産性

- ・ (D) Mikhail Bakhtin "Problems of Dostoevsky's Poetics" — 内的多声性
- ・ (A) 日本: 柄谷行人 / 蓮實重彦 / 大澤真幸 — 日本の文学批評・メディア論

★ 大学進学後への接続

1 年次: 文学概論・批評理論・メディア論

2-3 年次: 現代文学ゼミ / 比較文学ゼミ / 文化研究ゼミ

卒論候補: Netflix 時代の「読書」体験の社会学 / 漱石の小説とその映画化の比較 / オーディオブックは reading か?

第7章 (関大文学英語 攻略のコツ・5 分)

関大文学長文を完答するための 5 つの技術。

【コツ 1】 7 段論法 (歴史 → 通念 → 楽観の留保 → 通念批判 → 哲学的根拠 → 留保 → 実践的提言) を予測

【コツ 2】 文学・メディア論の固有名詞

- ・ (A) Aristotle (Poetics) / Wordsworth / Henry James — 古典的文学論
- ・ (B) Iser / Barthes / Bakhtin / Eagleton — 20 世紀文学理論
- ・ (C) Nussbaum / Booth / Currie — 文学と倫理の現代論者
- ・ (D) McLuhan / Sontag / Birkerts — メディア論

【コツ 3】 関大文学頻出語の文脈推測

displacement / accumulation / circumscribed / interiority / consciousness / inhabit / presuppose / take for granted / silence / distraction

【コツ 4】 誤答パターン 4 種 (関大文学版)

- ・ (A) 価値序列: morally superior / inherently inferior — 著者は中立的擁護派
- ・ (B) 極端化: all forms will disappear / shorter to compete
- ・ (C) 論点ずれ: 経済性・技術仕様 — 文学美学エッセイの範囲外
- ・ (D) 反対側の罫: 著者を「visual fiction を否定」と読み違える

【コツ 5】 時間配分 (関大 90 分)

長文には(A) 30 分を上限。

【最後にひとこと】

関大文学の英語は(A) 語学試験であると同時に(B) 文学批評リテラシー試験。本問の「読書 vs 視聴」論は、入学後に学ぶ文学理論・メディア論の核心テーマ。

第8章 (類題チャレンジ・10 分) [10 点]

本講義の手法を応用する 5 問。

(類題 1) 本文中の "interiority" の意味として最も近いものを選びなさい。

- ① 内面性・内的経験
- ② 建築の内装
- ③ 国内政治
- ④ 個人秘密

(類題 2) 本文の "circumscribed task" が示唆するものとして最も適切なものを選びなさい。

- ① 範囲を限定された (それゆえ少ない自由の) 作業
- ② 円形に配置された任務
- ③ 難解な計算問題
- ④ 宗教的義務

(類題 3) 本文中で Martha Nussbaum が引用される目的として最も適切なものを選びなさい。

- ① 文学の「他者の内面に住まう」道徳教育機能を論じた現代哲学者として
- ② TV の害を訴える社会活動家として
- ③ Hollywood の映画批評家として
- ④ 本文の著者の指導教官として

(類題 4) 本文の "take for granted" の意味として最も近いものを選びなさい。

- ① 当然のものとして享受する
- ② 贈り物を受け取る
- ③ 贈与税を払う
- ④ 国際援助を期待する

(類題 5) 本文の論理構成として最も近いものを選びなさい。

- ① 歴史的素描 (displacement の系譜) → 現代版の置換論 → 楽観派の留保 → 通念批判 → 哲学的区別 (reading vs watching) → Nussbaum 引用 → 実践的提言 (時間と静寂を作る)
- ② 結論先出し → 根拠列举のみ
- ③ 賛成意見の単純な列举
- ④ 歴史的説明のみで結論なし

第9章 (まとめ・宿題・5 分)

今日の核心整理と関大文学本番に向けた宿題

【本日の核心 5 か条】

- ① 文学擁護エッセイは (A) 「displacement story 批判 → accumulation 史観 → 現象学的区別」 の構造。
- ② (B) reading = production / watching = reception の区別を読む力。
- ③ (C) Nussbaum の interiority 概念 は関大文学頻出。
- ④ 誤答パターンは「(D) 価値序列」(morally superior 等)。著者は中立的擁護派。
- ⑤ 主旨設問は(A) 「読者の能動的選択への提言」型を選ぶ。

【宿題】

- ① 本講義の Q1-Q6 を見ないで本文だけ読み直し、自分で 6 問の設問を作成。
- ② 類題 5 問を解き直し、本文 7 段の各段にひと言タイトルを書き出す。
- ③ 過去問: 関西大学 文学部 英語 (過去 5 年分) から長文 1 題を選び、本日の手法で精読する。

【最後にひとこと】

関大文学の英語は(A) 語学試験であると同時に(B) 文学批評リテラシー試験。本問の読書論は、入学後に学ぶ文学理論・メディア論の核心テーマ。