第 II 問

Read the following passage and mark the most appropriate choice (a-d) for each item (8-12).

In recent decades, the concept of "deep work" has gained popularity as a counter-movement to the constant distractions of digital life. Coined by computer scientist Cal Newport, deep work refers to the ability to focus intensely on a cognitively demanding task without distraction. According to Newport, such focused effort allows individuals to produce work of exceptionally high quality and to learn complex skills faster than they otherwise could.

However, deep work is not merely about turning off notifications or finding a quiet room. It requires a fundamental shift in how we think about time and attention. In an era where multitasking is praised and rapid responses to emails are expected, prioritizing deep work means consciously rejecting the cultural pressure to be constantly available. This rejection is uncomfortable for many, as it may seem unprofessional or even antisocial.

Despite these challenges, research suggests that the benefits of deep work extend beyond productivity. Practitioners report greater satisfaction, a stronger sense of purpose, and improved cognitive endurance. Some argue that in an age of artificial intelligence, the ability to engage in deep, original thinking may become one of the most valuable—and rare—human skills.

(1) (8) According to the passage, what is the defining feature of deep work? (a) Working long hours every day (b) Focusing intensely on a difficult task without distraction (c) Collaborating closely with others online (d) Using AI to assist with complex problems

(2) (9) Why does adopting deep work require a fundamental shift in mindset? (a) Because it requires learning new technologies (b) Because it challenges social expectations of constant availability (c) Because it forces people to abandon their careers (d) Because it eliminates the need for any communication

(3) (10) Why is deep work uncomfortable for many people, according to the passage? (a) It demands physical exertion (b) It may appear unprofessional or antisocial (c) It is illegal in many workplaces (d) It causes immediate financial loss

← 重要 選択肢の語句は本文の言い換え (パラフレーズ)

← 罣 本文の単語を含むが意味が違う選択肢に注意

← 目標 10 分以内に passage 1 本 + 5 問

(4) (11) Beyond productivity, what additional benefits of deep work are mentioned? (a) Improved physical health and longevity (b) Increased income and promotions (c) Greater satisfaction and cognitive endurance (d) Better relationships with family members

(5) (12) In the age of AI, why might deep work be especially valuable? (a) AI can perform deep work faster than humans (b) Deep, original human thinking becomes rare and prized (c) Companies will pay more for shallow work (d) AI eliminates the need for human thinking altogether

第 III 問

Choose the most appropriate sentence from the following list (a-h) for each item (13-17).

挿入候補文 (a~h): - (a) However, the same technology that promises connection often leaves us more isolated than ever. - (b) This paradox lies at the heart of contemporary social discourse. - (c) For example, a recent survey found that frequent social media users report higher levels of loneliness than non-users. - (d) Such findings suggest that quantity of interaction is not the same as quality. - (e) On the other hand, in-person conversations, even brief ones, are linked to increased well-being. - (f) Therefore, designing technology that fosters real connection should be a societal priority. - (g) Some experts call this phenomenon "the loneliness epidemic of the digital age." - (h) Yet without active intervention, current trends are likely to continue.

本文: Few technologies in human history have spread as rapidly or as widely as smartphones and social media. They have transformed how we communicate, work, and even think about ourselves. (13)

Researchers have begun to document a striking phenomenon: the more time people spend connected to digital networks, the lonelier many of them feel.

(14) The number of online "friends" has skyrocketed, yet meaningful human connection appears to be in decline. (15) This may seem counterintuitive, but the data is increasingly difficult to dismiss.

(16) Brief face-to-face exchanges activate brain regions associated with empathy and emotional bonding in ways that digital interactions cannot match. (17) Without conscious effort to prioritize real-world connection, society risks compounding rather than solving its loneliness problem.
